To Succeed on the Stage.

John McCullough insists on familiarity with routine, and an habitual unconsciousness that leaves the intelligence perfectly free. But the two qualities which he regards as imperatively essential to success are comprised in the terms-heart and untiring industry.

Joe Jefferson says that the successful actor must be gifted with "sensibility, imagination, and personal magnetism. The student should begin at the foundation to learn. He thinks it a mistake to regard the lower positions degrad-Some actors he says, are inspirational and inventive, while others must have everything clearly mapped out, and a thorough plan of action arranged before they begin. Lawrence Barrett does not think that physical size has anything to do with success. He says there have been large generals and small generals. Salvini and Booth illustrate the fact in relation to tragedians. In his opinion, it would be best if a young man could start in a school of actors, so that he might have none but models to guide him. Every actor is an imitator of some time in his vonth. An actor can be great in only a few parts. William Warren says the chances for getting on are greater than when he was a boy. He says of the comedian and the two strolled down Main street and that he should have a real, genuine appreciation of the humorous and grotesque in life, and the magnetic power to make others feel as he feels. He need not, by any means, be what is known as a "funny man." He does not hold to the theory that any particular on his shoulder. His victim sank to the size of body is essential to success as a earth without a grean, but not satiscomedian. John Reeve and Burton fied with the result of his devilish were fat men decidedly; Charles Mat-thews, on the other hand, was thin.

IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT. PUTTING UP LEADERS.

Suspended to a Telegraph-Pole.

Vincennes, Ind., by a Mob

of Men. [Vincennes (Ind.) telegram.] The threats made last evening by angry citizens to summarily punish Oliver Canfield, the young misereant who shot Mrs. Mollie Gherkin last Tuesday night, were not idle ones. As the hours went by the knots of men who stood talking quietly at the street corners were gradually re-en-forced until several hundred were gathered in the vicinity of the jail. There was no loud talking or noisy display of any kind, but the grim, set features of those who had as-sembled to avenge the murdered woman boded ill for the unhappy wretch who cow-ered in his cell, fully alive to all that was transpiring and to the dreadful hopelessness of his case.

At midnight the avengers, a body some fifty strong, composed of the best citizens, moved through the inky darkness toward the fail. The stout doors were quickly crashed open with a piece of milroad iron that had been brought from the track for the purpose. Meeting with no resistance, the avengers rushed on to Canfield's cell, the door of which was battered down with three or four blows of the ram. The prisoner cowered down in a corner and attempted to pray, but was roughly bidden to prepare to come out. Trembling in every limb, and with features ghostlike in their sickly pallor, he complied, and was marched slowly between the two masked leaders out of the jail into the open air. The first proposition made on the outside of the jail yard being reached, was that Canfield should be strung up then and there, but, with strange persistency, he pleaded to be put to death on the same spot where his hepless sweetheart met her fate at his His proposition was received with deafening yells of approval by the crowd, and he was rushed off to a convenient telegraph pole within a stone's throw of the murder. A stout rope was slung over the lower cross-ties, a noose made, and the victim placed in position. His aspect was pitiable but it called forth no expression of mercy or sympathy from the determined men around him, and he was told if he had anything to say to say it quickly. He faltered forth that he was guilty, and was sorry he killed the woman. He begged that his mother be told that he tried to be reconsided to the Alministration. ciled to the Almighty, but that he should never go to heaven. He was given a min-ute to say his prayers, but he had by this time sunk so low that he could scarcely be roused. The rope was soon adjusted around his neck, and, amid the applause of the crowd, he was drawn to a height of ten feet and left to hang. There was scarcely a struggle perceptible, but the victim probably lived thirty minutes. A card was pinned to his coat requesting the Coroner to leave the body hanging until 12 o'clock to-day. No resistance whatever was made by the jail officials. The Sheriff merely refused to deliver up the keys of the jail when requested quietly to do so, but after the doors not interfered with. The crime for which Canfield suffered his terrible punishment was committed last Tuesday night. He had been paying marked attentions for a year past to Mrs. Mollie Gerkin, a beautiful widow. Canfield wished her to marry him, but as a divorce suit was pending between the woman and her husband, she was unable to comply. A week ago last Friday Canfield and the woman came to Vincennes from Washington, Ind. She obtained work in a boarding-house, while he spent his time in idly loating about. Tuesday evening he called at the house where she was staying and requested his sweetheart to take a walk with him. She complied with apparent willingness, turned in the direction of the bridge. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, Canfield threw his arms around Mrs. Gherkin's neck and kissed her. At the same moment he drew a revolver from his pocket and sent a bullet crashing into the marble forehead that rested lovingly and confidingly work he fired four more shots at her as she lay prostrate on the ground. A great erowd gathered and in the excitement Canfield escaped. He fled to Washington and went to his sister's house, teiling her what he had done, at the same time handing her a knife and revolver. These his sismother's house, and was captured early Thursday morning by the officers, who had followed closely on his heels. Brought back to Vincennes, he refused to give any motive for his deed, but declared that he was sober and rational at the time of its commission. Canfield was but 22 years of age. He was known as a hard character, and had spent most of his time working in HENRY WARD BEECHER is reported coal mines. Mrs. Gherkin died yesterday murderer were immediately consummated.

Nihilists Assassinate a Russian Officer.

A cable dispatch from St. Petersburg says: At Odessa Capt. Gerdzey, a prominent officer of the gendarmes, has been assassinated. His body was found with a bullet hole in the temple and a dagger sticking in his heart. A note pinned to the coat left no doubt that the murder was the work of N hilists. Capt. Gerdzey was a capable, courageous official, and specially devoted himself to grappling with Nih.lism. He thus incurred the bitterest hatred of the members of that body. The murder has produced a sensation in Russia equal to that occasioned by the assassination of Lieut. Col. Sudeikin.

Indiana Democrats The Indiana Democratic State Convention was called to order at Indianapolis by the Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, Chairman of the State Central Committee, who was received with much applause. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Allen.

The platform was read by the Hon. W. H. English. It renewed the pledge of fidelity to the Constitution and to the doctrines taught by the men who were its founders, condemning the corrupt and extravagant expenditure of the public money, advocated a tariff for revenue according to the necessities of the Government, and demanded the enforcement of the laws against Chinese immigration, and the redemption of public lands for the occupancy of citizens of the United States. A resolution to instruct the delegation tovote for McDonald at Chicage was carried amid applause. After the adoption of the platform. Isaac P. Gray, M. D. Manson, and David Turpie were placed in nomination for Governor. On the first ballot Gray was nominated, receiving 639 votes: Turi ie, 223; and Manson, 181. Gen. Manson made a speech saying he had supposed the soldier of two wars would have received more consideration in the Democratic convention, but he was satisfied and moved that the nomination be made unanimous. Col. Gray responded at some length, armigning the Republican party and discussing the Chicago platform. Several nominations were made for Lieutenant Governor, but all withdrew in favor of Gen. Manson, who was nominated by acclamation. W. R. Meyers, of Madison, was chosen for Secretary of State. James H. Rice, of Floyd, for Auditor, and John J. Cooper, of Marien, for Treasurer,

Ohio Democrats. The Ohio Democratic State Convention was called to order at Columbus by Congressman D. R. Paige. There were very few people present except the delegates. Gen. E. B. Finley was elected permanent Chairman. He reviewed the history of theparty, and predicted that it would carry Ohio this fall. Elmer White presented the platform, which reaffirmed the principles set forth in 1883. It indorsed the principles of the party as in favor of personal liberty; demanded the purification of the public service, and the equalization of public burdens; favored a tariff for revenue limit d to the necessities of the Governmen, and so adjusted as to prevent unequal burdens; advocated the adjustment of the wool tariff; commended the action of the Democratic Legislature in abolishing the contract-labor system, and its reform of prison management; and arraigned the Republican party. A radical free-trade plank, offered by Mr. Russell, of Cleveland, was voted down unanimously. A resolution offered by Congressman Converse favoring the nomination of Tilden was unanimously adopted. An effort to force the unit rule on the Chicago delegation was defeated. The delegates at large were elected as follows; Gen. Durbin Ward, Allen G. Thurman John R. McLean, and Lieut. Gov. Mueller. The State ticket was named as follows: Secretary, James W. Newman; Supreme Judge, C. D. Martin; Member of the Board of Public Works, John H. Beufer.

While the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamship Chala, Capt. Hogg, now in this port, says the Panama Star and Herald, was leaving Bahia, one of her cooks, who was asleep on the rad, fell overboard. An alarm was immediately given, the ship was stopped and backed, life-buoys were thrown overboard, and, with amazing rapidity, a hoat was in the water and in charge of Mr. Kellick, the first officer, pulling hard in the direction of the man, who was a splendid swimmer, and who made good progress in the direction of the boat. Suddenly, however, the place became alive with sharks, and it at oncebecame apparent the unfortunate man was doomed. Once he threw himself out of the water in an effort to escape the jaws of one of the monsters, but a few seconds afterward he was evidently seized and dragged under, as nothing more was seen of him. Other sharks, apparently disap-pointed in their hopes of prey, were then observed rushing through the water in all directions, and even appeared to meditate an attack on the boat, which, after an ineffectual search, pulled back to the ship. the rapidity with which they swarmed around the unfortunate man amazed all whowitnessed this striking proof of the voraciousness of these denizens of the deep.
